Dorjiling

I felt at the time very strongly, how much I was indebted to you for your kindness during the many pleasant days which I spent in your house I trust therefore you will excuse my putting on paper what I neglected to say at the time. I shall long look back with pleasure to the happy month I spent at Dorjiling and to the Malacca 11th May 1850.

My dear Hodgson,

In the hurry and bustle and excitement of leaving Dordiling, being I had not, or rather did not avail myself of an opportunity of saying what I felt at the time very strongly, how
kindness during the many pleasant
days which I spent in your house
I trust therefore you will excuse my
to say at the time. I shall long look back with pleasure to the happy month I spent at Dordiling and to the extreme kindness of every one there.

Joe and I only arrived at this place last evening, and have been most kindly received by Dr Saub.

We have had a good deal of heat and our progress has been very tedious. Our morning walks have however been very productive botanically - but we are not anxious to linger with the thermometer at 97° for a longer period than is absolutely necessary - and are already longing for the time when we shall commence the ascent towards Chirre.

We have packed up our contemplated visit to Gouar. Dr Saub assures us that several days would be requisite to see the place at all - and as we have not time to spare, and a hurried look is not worth while, we go on at once after breakfast towards Bauleah, which we hope to reach on the fourth day at the furthest.

I do not think that the ten days of ^{our} ~~your~~ journey have produced any event very worthy of record - beyond the usual porpoises and alligators of a Bengal nullah. Many cuts of the Mahamuddas are very narrow - quite canal like very deep & sluggish and peculiar Here it is a fine wide river with an immense population on both banks.

Believe me ever

Yours very truly

Thomas Munro
